Some Observations and Suggestions as to the Treatment.

Dr. Orville Horwitz makes some sensible suggestions regarding the treatment of sun-stroke, as just now so common here.

Dr. Horwitz bases his observations upon the record of fifty cases admitted into the Pennsylvania hospital during the months of July and August, 1885.

The first patient was received on the 16th day of July, when the thermometer marked a temperature of 96° F. in the shade.

Treatment.—It is believed that the new remedy, anti-pyren, was used for the first time by Dr. Horwitz; it was given, in all cases, in large doses, with the effect of keeping down the temperature after it had been reduced by the application of ice, fomentations and ice sheets to the surface; it was employed in the form of enemata, but the writer suggests that it would probably be more potent if used hypodermically. It was not resorted to unless the temperature showed a decided tendency to rise.

Much too, was first brought to notice by the doctor. It seemed to be decidedly advantageous in controlling the violence of the convulsions. It was resorted to in doses of ten grains, and, by the time the ten grains were given, the convulsions, as a rule, ceased. It is believed that the anti-pyren was administered in sixteen out of twenty-one cases of convulsions, and in all those it was of marked and immediate benefit; the violence of the attack being abated, and the patient being able to take fluids.

Either hypodermically acted as a better stimulant than whisky; administered by injection it controlled the convulsions, acted as a heart stimulant and improved respiration in a marked degree.

Blood-letting.—One individual was bled from the arm to the extent of twelve ounces; he died two days after from meningitis.

Four persons were cupped at the nape or behind the ears; about eight ounces were abstracted in each case. They all recovered. The individuals in whom blood-letting was resorted to were all strong, full-blooded, heavy-set men, with thickened cutaneous veins of their necks, standing out prominently, the pulse being full and bounding, convulsions setting in early.

Dr. Horwitz employed in sunstroke cases, were valuable, but in those affected by long exhaustion the benefit was well marked and conspicuous after their application.

Structure of duplets, in twenty-nine cases, administered when the patient was first seen acted as an excellent heart stimulant. The pulse at once became fuller and slower, the heart beating more regularly.

Accident to Es County Auditor's office. Yesterday Mr. B. M. Greider, a party of other gentlemen from Mount Pleasant went fishing. On their return they stopped on the road for a moment. The horses suddenly started and Mr. Greider being seated in the rear part of the wagon was thrown out of his head and shoulders, and severely injured. He was taken home, and Dr. L. W. Ziegler attended him. The extent of his injuries cannot be determined, but his condition is regarded as very critical.

At McGowan's Park. The tent is up and the first performance of the Mexican Pavilion show will be given this evening. A wreck on the railroad while containing the show so long that it is impossible to exhibit this afternoon. It was well patronized in Lebanon.

Read Clarke's advertisement and learn how you can be benefited by his medicine for several months, but he kept away from the city and only returned yesterday. In default of bail he was committed for a hearing.

Matrimonial Market Dull. Clerk of the Orphans Court Keller complains of dullness in the matrimonial market. Thus far this week he has issued only two marriage licenses and this month only 26, or one a day. He is calmly awaiting the matrimonial boom which will be along in September or October.

Engine No. 3 Tested. The Sun steamer, engine No. 2 of the fire department, recently repaired, was given a trial by the fire committee last evening on West Orange street. The steamer threw a good body of water but was not able to throw a great distance. The test was satisfactory to the committee.

Big Tronkey Steak. Jacob F. Charles found a thirty stalk on his father's farm near Mountville, which is the first of the kind here. Next!
